

The trend is continuing. Large corporations are flexing less competitive muscle and more litigious bullying to make a profit. To stay on top, they must win their way in courts rather than in the economic arena. This is not only un-American, but truly an under-handed strong-arm tactic demoting true advancement of our society. XM is the CD, the VHS, the TV, or the car of our time. When the winds bring change, those who don't like change seem to scream the loudest. XM Radio is a technology that threatens entrenched, close-minded, and anxious executives using technologies of yesterday. Those executives don't want the best for America, they want the best for themselves at the expense of true competition and development.

XM Radio's only flaw is that it is the best-of-class technology for delivering real-time audio to people all over the country wirelessly which makes the others guys squirm. XM Radio provides more choice, more opportunity, more information, more quality, more coverage and just more.

The outcry over XM is only a testament to it's potential. We pay for this service, while "free" broadcasters cry about losing their edge. If they truly provided a great service that could rival XM Radio then they would compete. Obviously, this is not the case. Supporting the NAB in this fight would mean supporting death to one of the reasons this country was founded. This country was founded to bring freedom to the individual. The NAB wants to limit freedom and advancement by bully others into what their view of the future looks like. Don't support these egregious tactics, support America, Support XM Radio!
